

SNOW NOTES

THE WRONGFUL CONVICTION OF JAMIE SNOW AND HOW THEY GOT AWAY WITH IT

Officer Jeff Pelo BPD Cold Case Interview, 3/2/1999:

"He was laying at an angle [...] About a 90 degree different angle than what he was layin originally [...] my assumption is that Paul Williams turned him over [...] he'd been moved before rescuse got there."

Jamie Snow's Trial, 1/2/2001:

Officer Paul Williams: "Well, he had been moved [...] if you get back behind that counter, there is no real room to work. [...] So he had been moved where there is a little bit more space."

Prosecution: "Tell me if this is an accurate statement of not. If he is laying on his left side there inside that corner, if you set him up so that his back was against the L shape of the counter and then brought him out to the end of the counter and laid him out and spread his legs out, would that be an indication of the movement the was involved here, just by sitting him up and then laying him down?"

Officer Paul Williams: "Well generally speaking, yes, that would be generally how I think I had done that."

Jeff Pelo, 4/1/2020:

"180 degrees is not accurate. That was either Katz or Barkes saying that during the March 2nd 1999 interview. I stress he was moved by Williams from behind the counter and Williams cut open his shirt. This was a big DO NOT DO by BPD SOP."
